INTRODUCTION

In 1851, Thomas Bridgman published the "Epitaphs from Copp's Hill Burial Ground" which with many additions were again printed in 1878 for William H. Whitmore. The inscriptions in the King's Chapel Burying Ground, copied by Thomas Bridgman were published in 1853 and part of those in the Granary Burying Ground, also copied by him, were published three years later. When Mr. Whitmore printed his volume of Copp's Hill epitaphs, he stated in the preface that "faithful copies of the inscriptions in the other grave-yards in old Boston" had been made for him by Thomas B. Wyman, jr., and it was hoped that these also might shortly be printed. Joel Munsell of Albany was his printer and several years later Mr. Munsell began to print the inscriptions in the Granary and Central Burying Grounds. When the volume was nearly completed, a fire destroyed the entire edition. A single set of the printed sheets, pages 1-128, was in the possession of Mr. Whitmore and after his death this unique copy was sold at the auction of his library and purchased by the late Frederick L. Gay of Brookline. It is now in the possession of his brother Ernest L. Gay who has most courteously placed it at our disposal in the compilation of the present volume. No further effort was made by Mr. Whitmore to print the inscriptions in the Granary and Central Burying Grounds.

Not long before 1910 the late Henry A. May was employed by the Boston Cemetery Department to copy the inscriptions in the Central Burying Ground and his copy, through the courtesy of John F. Keating, the Secretary of the Department, has been used as the basis for the present compilation. This copy has been carefully compared with the gravestones now standing and also with the Whitmore volume, the copy for which was made by T. B. Wyman, jr. about 1865. Variations and inscriptions on stones formerly standing but which have now disappeared are here included, the source being indicated in each instance. (See Tables of Abbreviations).

In addition to the inscriptions on gravestones and tombs the following pages also include records of deaths from tomb burials between 1810 and 1849 taken from the record of Boston deaths in the custody of the city registrar. This record was compiled by W. H. Whitmore from various sources and includes burial permits issued between 1810 and 1849 which, during that period indicated not only the burial ground but the numbered tomb in which the interment was made.

An effort also has been made to compile a list of the various owners of the tombs but the records of permits to build, and of transfers of title were found to be very incomplete and only a partial list is here printed together with the inscriptions on the tombs indicating ownership.

HISTORICAL ACCOUNT OF THE CENTRAL BURYING GROUND

As a result of a general complaint by the citizens and undertakers of Boston that no more space was available either in the King's Chapel or Granary burying grounds, in 1740, John Chambers, with other undertakers and grave diggers, petitioned the selectmen to purchase a new cemetery in the south end of the town. Eight years later, a committee was appointed to consider the matter and a plan was submitted at a town meeting held May 9, 1748, which provided for the laying out of about an acre and one-half near the southeast corner of the Common, bounded by the Tremont street Mall, and Frog Lane, the present Boylston street. It appeared, however, that the proposed lot would in part extend into the Common and opposition developed and the discussion continued for another eight years.

A second petition for the purchase of a burying ground in the South End was presented at a town meeting held May 15, 1754, which was referred to a committee composed in influential citizens who reported the 17th of September following a recommendation that the town purchase Col. Thomas Fitch's pasture at the foot of the Common, then the property of Andrew Oliver, jr. This report was accepted but no further action was taken until Oct. 11, 1754, when the citizens voted to purchase the property. The lot covered about two acres, and was bounded on the east by the land of Mrs. Martha Allen, on the south by Frog Lane, on the west by the Common or training field, and on the north by the Common.

Until 1810 this burying ground was called the "South Burying Ground" but in its early history was usually spoken of as the "Common Burying Ground" or the "Burying Ground at the foot of the Common." During 1810, a new burying ground was established on the Neck, on Washington street, which took the name of the "South", and the original "South" then became the "Central".

On the 24th of November, 1756, the selectmen decided that the "Burying Place at the foot of the Common . . . was fit to bury the dead in" and appointed John Hamstead, caretaker. It was the fourth town burial place.

The first tomb was built by Benjamin Bass in August, 1771 and from that time frequent grants to build were made to the townspeople, so that by 1803 a large number of tombs had been erected, many of them constructed by John and Nicholas Pierce, jr., masons. A ten foot brick wall along Boylston street was completed in 1803 upon which slate tablets were inserted, bearing the number and name of the owner of each tomb.

In 1836-7, sixty-nine tombs located where the Boylston street Mall was laid out were discontinued. These were in two rows parallel with the street and separated by a passageway for carriages. The tombs on the outside or boundary row were numbered 1-34 inclusive, and were back to the street and faced the burying ground. The twenty-four tombs in the second row were numbered from 126-149 while tombs 122-125 were located at the southern end of the eastern row and also were discontinued as they formed the width of the Mall as it afterwards was constructed. Seven tombs on the southern end of the western border extending diagonally to the southwest and numbered 35-41, also were discontinued and were covered by the Boylston street Mall. Leading through the wall from Boylston street were two gateways. In 1830 trees were purchased for the grounds by tomb owners, who also contributed more liberally in 1840 for the same purpose.

Although there are no records of interments before 1756, gravestones bearing earlier dates have been dug up. In all probability, these stones were removed to the new graveyard from one of the earlier burial places. A stone was found many years ago, bearing the following inscription:

SON TO CAPT. WILLIAM AND MARY | HIS WIFE DIED | AUG. 24,
1794 | AGED 14 DAYS

The upper part is missing, but the lower part of the stone is still on the ground. Another slate gravestone was dug up in July, 1906, which bore the following inscription:

THOMAS SON | * * * PATIENCE | * . * * EIGHLEY | * * * GED
3 MONTHS | * * * AUGst. Ye | * * * 1729

In 1835 there were two wooden fences, one on the outer, the other on the inner side of the Malls. There was no fence on Charles street.

In 1836, under Mayor Armstrong's administration, a substantial iron fence was built about the Common which necessitated the removal of the brick wall south of the burying ground. The tombs in that section were covered over, the city at the same time building two rows of granite tombs in the "Dell" which were offered to the owners at cost. Some availed themselves of the offer, others removed their dead to Mt. Auburn and elsewhere, and the remaining tombs were covered by the Mall.

Human remains and memorials have been dug up, on several occasions in that part of Boylston street, along a line of twenty feet from the iron fence bounding the Common. In November, 1894, while digging a trench for electric wires, a number of human remains were disclosed, and at the side of one was found a copper spear or standard head, probably a relic of some military funeral. At the same time, a slate head stone was found bearing the inscription :

MRS. ANN BLAKE | WIFE OF INCREASE BLAKE | AGED 28
YEARS | DIED MARCH 21, 1762

These discoveries prove that previous to the building of the first tomb in 1771, and the brick wall erected later, the burying ground extended to the middle of Boylston street, then known as Frog Lane and before the erection of the south line of tombs, later covered by the iron fence and sidewalk, there were many graves along what is now Boylston street, adjacent and parallel to the Mall. Many officers and soldiers of the Revolution were buried in the tombs and graves of this ground.

Originally, around the four sides of the ground there were 149 tombs. Of these 69 were covered when the Boylston street Mall was built, and at that time 60 new tombs were built in the "Dell", making a total of 140 tombs now in the Central Burying Ground. Of the 362 gravestones standing in 1907, 323 were slate, 34 white marble and 5 of sandstone.

On March 28, 1895, the contractors, Jones and Meeham, began excavations for the subway in the Public Garden beside Boylston street. As the work progressed along the Boylston street Mall, human remains were found eventually representing in all probability the bodies of 1100 adults. It was estimated that about two thousand human remains were disturbed before the subway was completed. All the boxes uncovered during the work were buried April 1, 1895, in one large excavation in the northwest corner of the ground. This mammoth grave is marked by a large slate slab inscribed as follows :
